

Society

Army Notes.

Mrs. Phil Sheridan, widow of Gen. Sheridan, United States Army, is spending the summer at Nonquitt, Mass., where she was recently joined by her small granddaughter Carlenia, who was brought from Fort Myer by Miss Sheridan, who has been visiting Lieut. and Mrs. Philip Sheridan for some time.

Upon Mrs. Sheridan's return in the late autumn to her home, 221 Massachusetts avenue, she will make the acquaintance with her first grandson, Philip H. Sheridan, third, the infant son of Lieut. and Mrs. Sheridan of Fort Myer.

Gen. James A. Buchanan, U. S. A., retired, accompanied by Gen. James Allen, U. S. A., retired, is at Saratoga, where they went for the races, as each of these officers are ardent horsemen.

Since the marriage of Gen. Buchanan's daughter and her departure to her husband's ranch at Porto Rico, he has kept bachelor hall with his old friend, Gen. Allen, at his fine estate at Upperville, Va., where the raising of race horses and blooded stock is his delight. Gen. Buchanan's horses always figure in all of the nearby horse shows during the season, especially in Washington, and at such times large house parties at the Upperville estate are generally recruited from Washington society.

That Col. William A. Shunk, U. S. A., has been relieved from duty in the Philippines and ordered to return to the United States is welcome news to his friends in Washington, who are hoping that he may be detailed to duty here, where both he and Mrs. Shunk are so favorably remembered from a former residence.

Col. Gerhardt, U. S. A., who, accompanied by his wife, recently returned from Honolulu, has taken apartments at the Marlborough, where they will make their home during the colonel's present detail.

Mrs. Leverett H. Walker, widow of Col. Walker, U. S. A., is spending the summer at Bethlehem, in the White mountains.

Maj. Gen. George W. Davis, U. S. A., retired, accompanied by his wife and daughter, Miss Elise Davis, are now at Lenox, where they are visiting Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Theodore Schwan, who have been at that place since the beginning of the summer. Gen. Davis' family will not return to their apartments at the Connecticut until the late autumn.

Maj. Sidney A. Cloman, U. S. A., accompanied by his wife, with whom he has recently returned from the Philippines, has been ordered to duty at the border.

Mrs. Henry T. Bull, wife of Lieut. Bull, U. S. A., recently left Washington to join her husband at El Paso, Tex., where he is now on duty.

Lieut. S. J. Heldner, United States Army, will be joined in September in Texas by Mrs. Heldner, who is at present in New York.

Col. Junius L. Powell, U. S. A., retired, accompanied by Mrs. and Miss Powell, will remain at Atlantic City for some time before returning to Washington and reopening their apartment at the Dresden.

Capt. Frank D. Wickham, United States Army, and wife are entertaining at the residence the latter's mother and sister, Mrs. Thomas H. Logan and Miss Evelyn Sherman Logan, who will remain until the first of October.

Mrs. William Payne Jackson, wife of Maj. Jackson, United States Army, is visiting friends at Galesburg, Ill., until the conclusion of the major's present inspection tour.

Col. D. E. McCarthy, United States Army, accompanied by Mrs. McCarthy, will come to Washington September 15 to attend the War College session which opens on that date and closes June next. For some years Col. and Mrs. McCarthy have been stationed in Chicago. Their daughter, Miss McCarthy, who has spent the summer at the season in the Adirondacks, where she visited friends at their summer home there, will not arrive here until the last of October.

Mrs. Langdon, wife of Capt. Russell C. Langdon, U. S. A., is at Rye Beach, N. H., where she is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Ames of St. Louis, with whom she will spend the autumn motoring through the White mountains.

Maj. William Guthrie, U. S. A., who has been at the Walter Reed Hospital in this city, has recovered and has returned to his post at Mobile, Ala.

Lieut. Francis A. Ruggles, U. S. A., joined the 3d Cavalry, now on the border, and will go to Texas at the expiration of his fortnight's leave.

Maj. Isaac Erwin, U. S. A., will come to Washington September 15 for duty at the War College. Maj. Erwin is now on temporary duty at Madison Barracks, N. Y.

Mrs. Beere, wife of Lieut. Donald M. Beere, U. S. A., accompanied by Donald Beere, Jr., has left West Point and is now on her way to join her husband at Douglas, Ariz., making the trip from New York to New Orleans by boat.

Lieut. Jacob L. Devers, U. S. A., and wife are spending a few weeks in Washington with relatives before sailing next month for Hawaii, to which place the lieutenant was recently ordered from West Point.

Capt. Ernest D. Scott, U. S. A., recently arrived in this city, has just been joined by his wife, who has given a series of farewell entertainments before leaving for Leavenworth, where Capt. and Mrs. Scott have been stationed for some time.

Brig. Gen. Frederick S. Strong, U. S. A., accompanied by his wife, will sail on one of the September transports for his new station in Hawaii. At the present time they are at Old Orchard, La Grange, Mich., where Gen. Strong's daughter-in-law, Lieut. and Mrs. Strong, are visiting.

Capt. Charles G. Harvey, U. S. A., on temporary duty at Fort Myer, goes from here to the mounted service school at Fort Riley, where his wife, who is at Fort Ethan Allen, Vt., will join him in September.

Col. C. L. H. Ruggles, U. S. A., and wife are entertaining their daughter's guest, Miss Ada Birmingham of Washington, D. C., at Fort Hancock. Miss Ruggles last week gave a beach party in her friend's honor.

Lieut. E. Reynolds, U. S. A., and wife have as their guest Mrs. Ingram of Washington at their quarters at Fort Monroe, Va.

Miss Dorothy Heintzelman, daughter of Capt. Stuart Heintzelman, U. S. A., is visiting friends in Columbus, Ohio. Miss Dorothy Heintzelman is the niece of Miss Mary Heintzelman, who, since the death of her father, the late Gen. Heintzelman, has made her home at 1517 N. street in this city.

Mrs. William B. Wallace, wife of Maj. Wallace, U. S. A., with their daughter, Miss Lucille Wallace, is spending the season at New London. In the autumn Mrs. Wallace will join her husband on the border.

Lieut. D'Alary Fehet, U. S. A., who has been stationed for some time in the Canal Zone, arrived in New York last week. Lieut. Fehet is the youngest son of Maj. Eugene Fehet, U. S. A., retired, and Mrs. Fehet, who made their home for many years in Washington, where the lieutenant was born.

At Eagles Mere, Pa.

Mrs. and Mrs. Abner H. Ferguson, who returned to their home in Chevy Chase on the 21st after spending some time in Winchester, Va., left Thursday for Eagles Mere, Pa., where they will remain for several weeks.

Week-End House Party.

Miss Ruth Rice of Baltimore, Md., is giving a week-end house party. Her guests include the Misses Tepman, Edna Smith, Lucy Willet and Messrs. Albert Connor, Wilson Dorsey, William Martin, Carl Eder and Randolph Moore, all of this city, and a number from New York and Philadelphia.

FAVORITE IN THE SMART SET.

MISS ELIZABETH HARDING, Daughter of Mr. W. P. G. Harding of the federal reserve board.

Picked Up Here and There.

Miss Natalie Campbell, who has been spending the winter in the Philippines

Mermaids May Find and uncle, Maj. and Mrs. Sidney

This Wardrobe. Cloman, enjoying a very charming visit, has undergone a thrilling experience, according to the Los Angeles Tribune.

She and her aunt decided to go to Japan and China, and, off some wicked coral reef not far from the coast of Yokohama, the good ship came to grief. And all sorts of excitement—a night in a rocking lifeboat, cold, hungry and wet, were thrown into the ladies' curriculum.

On their arrival at Tokyo the young woman was taken with appendicitis—perhaps brought on by the chill and hardship of the previous week. And such a time as they had getting away to a decent hospital.

They managed to flag a steamer and make arrangements for a record run to Manila, and the proper care of American nurses and physicians, there being nothing worthy the name in Tokyo.

However, all's well that ends well, and pretty Miss Campbell, now quite convalescent, is planning to visit the Avery McCarthys within a few weeks.

Later, when she will come to New York and Washington, where she has many close friends.

The Los Angeles Sunday Times thus describes an "Indian" reception:

A Change From the Conventional. eucalyptus were completely inclosed with boughs and wistaria vines, and were lighted by shades electric bulbs. Cozy little tepees were contrived in each corner of the garden, near a miniature lake, upon which tiny canoes were floating. Various Indian tribes were cleverly designated. A blazing bonfire was surrounded by stern looking warrior chieftains smoking the pipe of peace, and wild animal skins did much for the realistic scenic effects.

Correct attire for the occasion was Indian blankets and feathered head-dresses, Indian names being acquired for the occasion.

A marquee for dancing had been erected on the lawn, and a stringed orchestra in Indian garb furnished appropriate music from beneath a canopy of constellations. Indian games and archery, with prizes of Indian pottery and relics, made amusing diversion.

The "wigwag" sayings, in which bucks and squaws participated, was contrived ingeniously with envelopes attached to strings, twined in and out the branches of the trees, the surprise envelope containing the announcement of the engagement of the son of the house. A midnight barbecue wound up the entertainment.

No longer will the family cat wander joyously forth in the dewy morn to nibble the blooms in the neighbors' garden or chase the golden butterflies through the sunlit walks, says the Salt Lake Telegram.

No longer may he fear faintly forth in the starlight to sing paeans of praises to an unappreciative world.

Instead must he hide himself to the sheltering limbs of some leafy tree when footstep is heard or hide in the darkest corner of the coal cellar when he takes his afternoon siesta. The man's burden has at last fallen upon his careless shoulders and wary indeed is the mere feline who escapes the onrush of an invading style.

The cat is the favorite by many lengths. His old enemy, the toy dog, is fast giving way to the newer fad and the more smart girls of New York and Washington are really quite out of it these days if they do not carry a purring kitten in their strolls down the avenue or the boardwalk, as the case may be.

One of the young favorites in Washington society who has been numbered among the students at the Harvard summer school really is the sponsor of the latest craze which originated when she marched gaily down the college thoroughfare with her favorite, a tiny puss, observing the strictest neutrality frequently in a French gown, a Russian toque and a German coat, will assume more circumspect though not less brilliant, apparel in the way of silks and brocades in ecclesiastical colors and designs.

These materials with Gothic arch effects and the blues, ambers and reds of the stained glass in a cathedral window, are exquisite fabrics which will have a fine background in the tapestried corridors and drawing rooms of Mrs. Edson Bradley, Mrs. Perry Belmont, Mrs. Robert Patterson and other chateaux of the fashionable west and which is becoming known as the King's highway of the National Capital owing to the number of white marble and stone mansions.

A beach widowers' smoker is the latest novelty in army social life, the initial entertainment having been given at the Douglas, Ariz., Country Club early in the month. The guests were the bachelor widowers now at this progressive post.

Swimming parties were the newest rage of last year indulged in to the limit at every army post from coast to coast. Ad interim came the popularity of roof garden dinner parties, it being generally conceded that the old-fashioned Welsh rabbit and card parties had long since palled as up-to-date forms of entertainment. Automobile parties are, of course, always in vogue winter or summer, with a steady increase in favor particularly in the far western posts, where formerly life ran at a woefully monotonous pace.

The navy, not to be outdone by the army in point of novelty, has this season introduced the novelty of houseboat parties, with pronounced success. The largest of these was entertained by Rear Admiral and Mrs. Walter MacLean at the commandant's house at the Norfolk navy yard, where the guests were those of Mr. and Mrs. Lear Black of Baltimore, who have spent the summer in their house boat saunterings along the Atlantic coast.

Mme. Bekhmeteff, wife of the Russian ambassador, is actively interesting herself in the work of organizing a Russian bazaar to be held at one of the National Guard armories in New York at the Christmas season, when the proceeds will be turned over to the Russian-American Relief Association for war sufferers in Russia.

This does not mean that she is simply lending her name to the undertaking, but that she is actually going in for some of the real hard work always necessary to insure success to any undertaking, large or small.

Hard work is never daunts Mme. Bekhmeteff, as was finely demonstrated at the time of the Russo-Japanese war, when she went from one hospital to another, not only assisting with her wealth, but actually doing the work of a volunteer nurse all during the war period. For this personal work of nursing, many times under dangerous circumstances, Mme. Bekhmeteff was decorated by the czar with a very splendid jeweled decoration of which she is justly proud.

Another line in which her energetic work has told in a most unusual manner is the teaching of her Russian maid to read, write and speak English. This has been done systematically by holding regular school classes for them each day.

Unusually gifted herself as a linguist, Mme. Bekhmeteff not only speaks Russian as fluently as English, but has mastered up to the present time over one dozen of the Russian dialects, an accomplishment not possessed by any other American woman.

York and Newport, who set out determinedly to keep the soldier from the front in literature for

Border Soldiers. Texas supplied with reading matter, reports that she has so far shipped 1,000 pounds of literature to the border. This has gone forward in 200 pound lots, and a weird assortment of reading matter it proved to be. Mrs. Vanderbilt was bravely assisted in the work by her son and daughter, Miss Grace and Cornelius, Jr.

Gossip for Society Folk.

An event of interest to Washington society and Americans in general took place the past week at Salem, Ind., when, during the homecoming celebration in honor of the anniversary of the state, special tribute was paid to the memory of the late John Hay, statesman, diplomat and litterateur, whose charming home on Lafayette Square, this city, the scene of many brilliant entertainments, is still maintained by his daughter, Mrs. James Wadsworth, wife of the junior senator from New York.

The tribute took the form of a marker on the little cottage which was Mrs. Hay's birthplace and his home until the early '40s when the Hay family removed to Illinois. This historic cottage was erected in 1825 and was known as the Salem Grammar School. It was later sold to Charles and Helen Hay, and here, October 8, 1838, the distinguished writer was born. This county in which Mr. Hay was born boasts of three distinguished statesmen of state, John W. Foster, John Hay and Walter Q. Gresham, besides two cabinet members who left their imprint on national affairs, Col. Dick Thompson and Cyrus L. Denham.

Mr. Walter G. Peter has recently loaned to the National Museum an interesting collection of pictures, furniture, china, jewelry, manuscripts and letters, as well as other articles of historic and personal interest familiar to Washingtonians who enjoyed the friendship and hospitality of his grandfather, Mrs. Britannia W. Kennon of Tudor place, Georgetown, who was a daughter of Martha Custis, the granddaughter of Mrs. Washington and her first husband, Daniel Parke Custis.

This collection contains letters from Alexander Hamilton, Henry Knox and George Washington Lafayette, son of Marquis de Lafayette, written to Mrs. Washington on the death of the strictest neutrality frequently in a French gown, a Russian toque and a German coat, will assume more circumspect though not less brilliant, apparel in the way of silks and brocades in ecclesiastical colors and designs.

These materials with Gothic arch effects and the blues, ambers and reds of the stained glass in a cathedral window, are exquisite fabrics which will have a fine background in the tapestried corridors and drawing rooms of Mrs. Edson Bradley, Mrs. Perry Belmont, Mrs. Robert Patterson and other chateaux of the fashionable west and which is becoming known as the King's highway of the National Capital owing to the number of white marble and stone mansions.

A beach widowers' smoker is the latest novelty in army social life, the initial entertainment having been given at the Douglas, Ariz., Country Club early in the month. The guests were the bachelor widowers now at this progressive post.

Swimming parties were the newest rage of last year indulged in to the limit at every army post from coast to coast. Ad interim came the popularity of roof garden dinner parties, it being generally conceded that the old-fashioned Welsh rabbit and card parties had long since palled as up-to-date forms of entertainment. Automobile parties are, of course, always in vogue winter or summer, with a steady increase in favor particularly in the far western posts, where formerly life ran at a woefully monotonous pace.

The navy, not to be outdone by the army in point of novelty, has this season introduced the novelty of houseboat parties, with pronounced success. The largest of these was entertained by Rear Admiral and Mrs. Walter MacLean at the commandant's house at the Norfolk navy yard, where the guests were those of Mr. and Mrs. Lear Black of Baltimore, who have spent the summer in their house boat saunterings along the Atlantic coast.

Mme. Bekhmeteff, wife of the Russian ambassador, is actively interesting herself in the work of organizing a Russian bazaar to be held at one of the National Guard armories in New York at the Christmas season, when the proceeds will be turned over to the Russian-American Relief Association for war sufferers in Russia.

This does not mean that she is simply lending her name to the undertaking, but that she is actually going in for some of the real hard work always necessary to insure success to any undertaking, large or small.

Hard work is never daunts Mme. Bekhmeteff, as was finely demonstrated at the time of the Russo-Japanese war, when she went from one hospital to another, not only assisting with her wealth, but actually doing the work of a volunteer nurse all during the war period. For this personal work of nursing, many times under dangerous circumstances, Mme. Bekhmeteff was decorated by the czar with a very splendid jeweled decoration of which she is justly proud.

YORK AND NEWPORT, WHO SET OUT DETERMINEDLY TO KEEP THE SOLDIER FROM THE FRONT IN LITERATURE FOR

Border Soldiers. Texas supplied with reading matter, reports that she has so far shipped 1,000 pounds of literature to the border. This has gone forward in 200 pound lots, and a weird assortment of reading matter it proved to be. Mrs. Vanderbilt was bravely assisted in the work by her son and daughter, Miss Grace and Cornelius, Jr.

Gossip for Society Folk.

An event of interest to Washington society and Americans in general took place the past week at Salem, Ind., when, during the homecoming celebration in honor of the anniversary of the state, special tribute was paid to the memory of the late John Hay, statesman, diplomat and litterateur, whose charming home on Lafayette Square, this city, the scene of many brilliant entertainments, is still maintained by his daughter, Mrs. James Wadsworth, wife of the junior senator from New York.

The tribute took the form of a marker on the little cottage which was Mrs. Hay's birthplace and his home until the early '40s when the Hay family removed to Illinois. This historic cottage was erected in 1825 and was known as the Salem Grammar School. It was later sold to Charles and Helen Hay, and here, October 8, 1838, the distinguished writer was born. This county in which Mr. Hay was born boasts of three distinguished statesmen of state, John W. Foster, John Hay and Walter Q. Gresham, besides two cabinet members who left their imprint on national affairs, Col. Dick Thompson and Cyrus L. Denham.

Mr. Walter G. Peter has recently loaned to the National Museum an interesting collection of pictures, furniture, china, jewelry, manuscripts and letters, as well as other articles of historic and personal interest familiar to Washingtonians who enjoyed the friendship and hospitality of his grandfather, Mrs. Britannia W. Kennon of Tudor place, Georgetown, who was a daughter of Martha Custis, the granddaughter of Mrs. Washington and her first husband, Daniel Parke Custis.

This collection contains letters from Alexander Hamilton, Henry Knox and George Washington Lafayette, son of Marquis de Lafayette, written to Mrs. Washington on the death of the strictest neutrality frequently in a French gown, a Russian toque and a German coat, will assume more circumspect though not less brilliant, apparel in the way of silks and brocades in ecclesiastical colors and designs.

These materials with Gothic arch effects and the blues, ambers and reds of the stained glass in a cathedral window, are exquisite fabrics which will have a fine background in the tapestried corridors and drawing rooms of Mrs. Edson Bradley, Mrs. Perry Belmont, Mrs. Robert Patterson and other chateaux of the fashionable west and which is becoming known as the King's highway of the National Capital owing to the number of white marble and stone mansions.

A beach widowers' smoker is the latest novelty in army social life, the initial entertainment having been given at the Douglas, Ariz., Country Club early in the month. The guests were the bachelor widowers now at this progressive post.

Swimming parties were the newest rage of last year indulged in to the limit at every army post from coast to coast. Ad interim came the popularity of roof garden dinner parties, it being generally conceded that the old-fashioned Welsh rabbit and card parties had long since palled as up-to-date forms of entertainment. Automobile parties are, of course, always in vogue winter or summer, with a steady increase in favor particularly in the far western posts, where formerly life ran at a woefully monotonous pace.

The navy, not to be outdone by the army in point of novelty, has this season introduced the novelty of houseboat parties, with pronounced success. The largest of these was entertained by Rear Admiral and Mrs. Walter MacLean at the commandant's house at the Norfolk navy yard, where the guests were those of Mr. and Mrs. Lear Black of Baltimore, who have spent the summer in their house boat saunterings along the Atlantic coast.

Mme. Bekhmeteff, wife of the Russian ambassador, is actively interesting herself in the work of organizing a Russian bazaar to be held at one of the National Guard armories in New York at the Christmas season, when the proceeds will be turned over to the Russian-American Relief Association for war sufferers in Russia.

This does not mean that she is simply lending her name to the undertaking, but that she is actually going in for some of the real hard work always necessary to insure success to any undertaking, large or small.

Hard work is never daunts Mme. Bekhmeteff, as was finely demonstrated at the time of the Russo-Japanese war, when she went from one hospital to another, not only assisting with her wealth, but actually doing the work of a volunteer nurse all during the war period. For this personal work of nursing, many times under dangerous circumstances, Mme. Bekhmeteff was decorated by the czar with a very splendid jeweled decoration of which she is justly proud.

Another line in which her energetic work has told in a most unusual manner is the teaching of her Russian maid to read, write and speak English. This has been done systematically by holding regular school classes for them each day.

Unusually gifted herself as a linguist, Mme. Bekhmeteff not only speaks Russian as fluently as English, but has mastered up to the present time over one dozen of the Russian dialects, an accomplishment not possessed by any other American woman.

York and Newport, who set out determinedly to keep the soldier from the front in literature for

Border Soldiers. Texas supplied with reading matter, reports that she has so far shipped 1,000 pounds of literature to the border. This has gone forward in 200 pound lots, and a weird assortment of reading matter it proved to be. Mrs. Vanderbilt was bravely assisted in the work by her son and daughter, Miss Grace and Cornelius, Jr.

Gossip for Society Folk.

An event of interest to Washington society and Americans in general took place the past week at Salem, Ind., when, during the homecoming celebration in honor of the anniversary of the state, special tribute was paid to the memory of the late John Hay, statesman, diplomat and litterateur, whose charming home on Lafayette Square, this city, the scene of many brilliant entertainments, is still maintained by his daughter, Mrs. James Wadsworth, wife of the junior senator from New York.

The tribute took the form of a marker on the little cottage which was Mrs. Hay's birthplace and his home until the early '40s when the Hay family removed to Illinois. This historic cottage was erected in 1825 and was known as the Salem Grammar School. It was later sold to Charles and Helen Hay, and here, October 8, 1838, the distinguished writer was born. This county in which Mr. Hay was born boasts of three distinguished statesmen of state, John W. Foster, John Hay and Walter Q. Gresham, besides two cabinet members who left their imprint on national affairs, Col. Dick Thompson and Cyrus L. Denham.

Mr. Walter G. Peter has recently loaned to the National Museum an interesting collection of pictures, furniture, china, jewelry, manuscripts and letters, as well as other articles of historic and personal interest familiar to Washingtonians who enjoyed the friendship and hospitality of his grandfather, Mrs. Britannia W. Kennon of Tudor place, Georgetown, who was a daughter of Martha Custis, the granddaughter of Mrs. Washington and her first husband, Daniel Parke Custis.

This collection contains letters from Alexander Hamilton, Henry Knox and George Washington Lafayette, son of Marquis de Lafayette, written to Mrs. Washington on the death of the strictest neutrality frequently in a French gown, a Russian toque and a German coat, will assume more circumspect though not less brilliant, apparel in the way of silks and brocades in ecclesiastical colors and designs.

These materials with Gothic arch effects and the blues, ambers and reds of the stained glass in a cathedral window, are exquisite fabrics which will have a fine background in the tapestried corridors and drawing rooms of Mrs. Edson Bradley, Mrs. Perry Belmont, Mrs. Robert Patterson and other chateaux of the fashionable west and which is becoming known as the King's highway of the National Capital owing to the number of white marble and stone mansions.

A beach widowers' smoker is the latest novelty in army social life, the initial entertainment having been given at the Douglas, Ariz., Country Club early in the month. The guests were the bachelor widowers now at this progressive post.

Swimming parties were the newest rage of last year indulged in to the limit at every army post from coast to coast. Ad interim came the popularity of roof garden dinner parties, it being generally conceded that the old-fashioned Welsh rabbit and card parties had long since palled as up-to-date forms of entertainment. Automobile parties are, of course, always in vogue winter or summer, with a steady increase in favor particularly in the far western posts, where formerly life ran at a woefully monotonous pace.

The navy, not to be outdone by the army in point of novelty, has this season introduced the novelty of houseboat parties, with pronounced success. The largest of these was entertained by Rear Admiral and Mrs. Walter MacLean at the commandant's house at the Norfolk navy yard, where the guests were those of Mr. and Mrs. Lear Black of Baltimore, who have spent the summer in their house boat saunterings along the Atlantic coast.

Mme. Bekhmeteff, wife of the Russian ambassador, is actively interesting herself in the work of organizing a Russian bazaar to be held at one of the National Guard armories in New York at the Christmas season, when the proceeds will be turned over to the Russian-American Relief Association for war sufferers in Russia.

This does not mean that she is simply lending her name to the undertaking, but that she is actually going in for some of the real hard work always necessary to insure success to any undertaking, large or small.

Hard work is never daunts Mme. Bekhmeteff, as was finely demonstrated at the time of the Russo-Japanese war, when she went from one hospital to another, not only assisting with her wealth, but actually doing the work of a volunteer nurse all during the war period. For this personal work of nursing, many times under dangerous circumstances, Mme. Bekhmeteff was decorated by the czar with a very splendid jeweled decoration of which she is justly proud.

Another line in which her energetic work has told in a most unusual manner is the teaching of her Russian maid to read, write and speak English. This has been done systematically by holding regular school classes for them each day.

Unusually gifted herself as a linguist, Mme. Bekhmeteff not only speaks Russian as fluently as English, but has mastered up to the present time over one dozen of the Russian dialects, an accomplishment not possessed by any other American woman.

York and Newport, who set out determinedly to keep the soldier from the front in literature for

Border Soldiers. Texas supplied with reading matter, reports that she has so far shipped 1,000 pounds of literature to the border. This has gone forward in 200 pound lots, and a weird assortment of reading matter it proved to be. Mrs. Vanderbilt was bravely assisted in the work by her son and daughter, Miss Grace and Cornelius, Jr.

nel is the teaching of her Russian maid to read, write and speak English. This has been done systematically by holding regular school classes for them each day.

Unusually gifted herself as a linguist, Mme. Bekhmeteff not only speaks Russian as fluently as English, but has mastered up to the present time over one dozen of the Russian dialects, an accomplishment not possessed by any other American woman.

York and Newport, who set out determinedly to keep the soldier from the front in literature for

Border Soldiers. Texas supplied with reading matter, reports that she has so far shipped 1,000 pounds of literature to the border. This has gone forward in 200 pound lots, and a weird assortment of reading matter it proved to be. Mrs. Vanderbilt was bravely assisted in the work by her son and daughter, Miss Grace and Cornelius, Jr.

Gossip for Society Folk.

An event of interest to Washington society and Americans in general took place the past week at Salem, Ind., when, during the homecoming celebration in honor of the anniversary of the state, special tribute was paid to the memory of the late John Hay, statesman, diplomat and litterateur, whose charming home on Lafayette Square, this city, the scene of many brilliant entertainments, is still maintained by his daughter, Mrs. James Wadsworth, wife of the junior senator from New York.

The tribute took the form of a marker on the little cottage which was Mrs. Hay's birthplace and his home until the early '40s when the Hay family removed to Illinois. This historic cottage was erected in 1825 and was known as the Salem Grammar School. It was later sold to Charles and Helen Hay, and here, October 8, 1838, the distinguished writer was born. This county in which Mr. Hay was born boasts of three distinguished statesmen of state, John W. Foster, John Hay and Walter Q. Gresham, besides two cabinet members who left their imprint on national affairs, Col. Dick Thompson and Cyrus L. Denham.

Mr. Walter G. Peter has recently loaned to the National Museum an interesting collection of pictures, furniture, china, jewelry, manuscripts and letters, as well as other articles of historic and personal interest familiar to Washingtonians who enjoyed the friendship and hospitality of his grandfather, Mrs. Britannia W. Kennon of Tudor place, Georgetown, who was a daughter of Martha Custis, the granddaughter of Mrs. Washington and her first husband, Daniel Parke Custis.

This collection contains letters from Alexander Hamilton, Henry Knox and George Washington Lafayette, son of Marquis de Lafayette, written to Mrs. Washington on the death of the strictest neutrality frequently in a French gown, a Russian toque and a German coat, will assume more circumspect though not less brilliant, apparel in the way of silks and brocades in ecclesiastical colors and designs.

These materials with Gothic arch effects and the blues, ambers and reds of the stained glass in a cathedral window, are exquisite fabrics which will have a fine background in the tapestried corridors and drawing rooms of Mrs. Edson Bradley, Mrs. Perry Belmont, Mrs. Robert Patterson and other chateaux of the fashionable west and which is becoming known as the King's highway of the National Capital owing to the number of white marble and stone mansions.

A beach widowers' smoker is the latest novelty in army social life, the initial entertainment having been given at the Douglas, Ariz., Country Club early in the month. The guests were the bachelor widowers now at this progressive post.

Swimming parties were the newest rage of last year indulged in to the limit at every army post from coast to coast. Ad interim came the popularity of roof garden dinner parties, it being generally conceded that the old-fashioned Welsh rabbit and card parties had long since palled as up-to-date forms of entertainment. Automobile parties are, of course, always in vogue winter or summer, with a steady increase in favor particularly in the far western posts, where formerly life ran at a woefully monotonous pace.

The navy, not to be outdone by the army in point of novelty, has this season introduced the novelty of houseboat parties, with pronounced success. The largest of these was entertained by Rear Admiral and Mrs. Walter MacLean at the commandant's house at the